Description

This late 19th-century oil painting by British artist Alfred Walter Williams (1823-1905) depicts a picturesque view of Llyn Dinas, a lake in Snowdonia, north Wales. Nothing compares to the iconic British countryside. Whether it's the tranquil heathlands of the New Forest, the rolling Kentish downs, or the majestic peaks of North Wales - the beauty of our landscape is unparalleled. As such, each of us retains a unique collection of fond memories - experiences entwined with a season, place or view. When memories are recalled, we blend reality with emotion - our imaginations conjure images of harmonious designs. Our time among nature becomes enveloped in a sensation - something greater than the aesthetic itself. Alfred Walter Williams painted that image. With a sympathetic eye, he captured the views he treasured in a flattering light. His clouds congregate into a symphony of graduated tints across a balanced horizon of upland terrain. While his animals roam through verdant pasture - perfectly positioned to aid a composition. Here, in this exquisite work from 1871, the abundant banks of the shimmering Llyn Dinas are deftly rendered. Note how he's created several routes of ...
