Description

The globe was originally intended to be part of the Great Exhibition, however its size made this impossible. Instead it was a landmark in Leicester Square for 10 years, being demolished in 1861. Final image (not for sale) illustrates the interior of the building and 60 foot globe! A copy of this rare print is held in the collection of both the V&A and Science Museum in London. From the same series of prints entitled 'The World's Metropolis or Mighty London' and also available, is Marble Arch. Both with giltwood and parcel- gilt frames made by Aitken Dott of Edinburgh. Size including frames: 32cm high x 39cm wide. Happy to post at cost price. Please let me know if you have any questions. Follow us on Instagram: jeckyllandco
