Description

A superb brass George III footman dating from circa 1800. A substantial size and weight, with beautifully curved legs it features a rectangular solid top above a shaped frieze and has two swan neck carry handles to the sides. Footmen were used to stand plates or dishes on near the fire to warm them, or to stand kettles on etc. These look great in Inglenook fireplaces or can be used as stylish coffee tables or foot rests. Construction: Brass Condition Report: Solid and sturdy with wear and marks commensurate with age. Very heavy. Dimensions
