Description

This is an antique 3 fold scrap screen. An English, oak photographic prop or decorative room divider, dating to the early Victorian period and later, circa 1850. Strikingly decorated screen, with fascinating colour and black & white illustrations. Displays a desirable aged patina and in hand-decorated order. Select oak frame presents fine grain interest and warm caramel hues. Ideal for use as a photographic prop or for distinctive room division. Of three fold form, with domed top and turned acorn finials. One side presented in colour, with the reverse in monochrome. Collated scrap works from newsprint, advertising, photographs, cards and magazines. Can extend to near-flat for propping against a wall - could be used as a headboard. This is a fascinating antique 3 fold scrap screen, with superb Victorian period images accentuating each fold. Solid joints and construction, delivered ready for the home.
