Description

Victorian walnut Davenport desk This Victorian walnut Davenport desk was made circa 1870. It has multiple features that puts this into the better criteria of desirability for a Davenport. Having the serpentine front to the sloped writing surface, the writing surface has inset gilt tooled leather. The lid lifts to reveal the birds-eye maple interior tht also has a pair of pen drawers. At the top of the Davenport desk you have the stationery box with its lovely pierced brass gallery, the lid opens to real a fitted interior with inkwells and a pen tray. Having the cupboard door to the right-hand side is another sign of it being of a higher quality than the norm. The arched panel door opens to reveal the 4 drawers, that are lined in fine mahogany. To the left-hand side of the Davenport, you have a matching arched panel. It has the elegant cabriole solid walnut legs that join to the platform base with the bun feet with the concealed castors under. The rear of the desk is finished so that it can stand away from the wall, the back with a pane framed by walnut moulding. Imagine this elegant desk in your home and how lovely it will be to sit at as use write letters or use your i-p...
