Description

A superb pair of water colours of Rouen in France by Paul Braddon that date to around 1900. They measure 40 inches by 30 inches, which is larger than his normal work. With attractive subject matters, showing street scenes with a church and Rouen cathedral in the background. They capture the atmospheric period of town life in France at the turn of the 20th Century. In good condition with nice gilded frames in oak that really show off the subject matter. For collection or I can arrange delivery.....please contact me for a quote. Paul Braddon was born in Birmingham in 1864 and painted landscapes in the watercolour medium. His work can be found in a number of art galleries worldwide, especially the United States. He died in 1937 and his work is highly sought after and fetches respectable prices when it comes up for sale. These are an outstanding pair of original works of art that could grace an elegant period or contemporary home.
