Description

We are delighted to offer this magnificent Georgian solid silver teapot made in London 1830 with marks of Edward, Edward junior, John & William Barnard. As expected from the Barnards', this teapot has been meticulously crafted and ornately decorated in the most exquisite manner. The teapot features a melon-shaped design that blends seamlessly with a spectacularly detailed hand-chased sea spume section on top. The top lid matches the melon-shaped body with a floral finial on top. The foot presents additional embellishing that forms a wave-like design, embracing the nautical theme to its fullest, perhaps also symbolising the plentiful tea that could be held within. Its spout and handles are equally regal extending outwards with acanthus leaf decorations which complete the overall look and contribute to a three-dimensional design. Such skilful craftsmanship and silver artistry combined make for a piece that is delightful to view from all angles. The interior of the teapot is fully gilded (gold on top of solid silver) which adds a layer of protection from the silver tarnishing and remains clean/leak-free, allowing it to also be used practically - a fabulous way to ...
