Description

Antique and rare Meissen porcelain figurine of the dancing lady with tambourine, middle 19th century. Standing barefoot woman dancing and playing the tambourine, she is dressed in a beautiful floral fluttering tunic, on her head the wreath of white flowers, the figure has painted with pastel colors, each detail is carefully painted. The figurine is really kind of in motion, just stopped for a second. That distinguishes the quality and art of Meissen. Meissen underglaze mark on the base confirmed the mentioned period. Also the number 12 impressed. In the early 19th century, technical innovations were introduced and the wares were made in the popular taste which improved the situation again. Superb modelling and painting were characteristic of Meissen porcelain; its products were unsurpassed, widely exported and much imita...
