Description

Pair of Early 20th Century English Copper & Glass Factory Lights A highly decorative and well-shaped matched pair of early 20th Century English copper and mercury glass factory light pendants. Recently rewired to a 240v UK power source. The pendants are constructed of copper sheet metal and the inner reflective sections from a Holophane mercury reflective glass. These examples would look very stylish hung in a modern-day kitchen or hallway setting. Both surfaces are worn with aged stains (scratches and dinks) as shown, the mercury glass is also aged through flaking and decay. The top gallery is not in place, but this doesn't matter as they are in place and not noticeable once hung from a height.
