Description

1920's Wedgwood Daisy Makeig-Jones Fairyland , Pearl Lustre Butterfly Bowl,model Z4832 Of all of Wedgwood's ware, the most highly prized and keenly sought are the company's range of Fairyland Lustre. Fairyland Lustre was the name given to a range of ornamental lustre wares by "Daisy" Makeig-Jones (full name, Susannah Margaretta "Daisy" Makeig-Jones (1881-1945) who was a designer and artist for Wedgwood. Daisy Makeig-Jones was born in Wath-upon-Deane near Rotherham in Yorkshire, the eldest of seven children, and she came from a professional background. After attending boarding school and studying the Torquay School of Art, she joined Wedgwood in 1909, aged in her late twenties. The first fairyland Lustre was produced from her designs in 1915. Fairyland Lustre is characterised by bright underglaze colours, commercial lustres and printed figures (often elves and fairies), scenes and landscapes. Daisy Makeig-Jones retired in 1931 and only one new pattern was designed after that date. Production of the range continued until 1941, and once all the stock had been sold there was little interest in the range until a revival in popularity in the 1960s, leading to a consequent rise...
