Description

One of the very first paintings I sold on SellingAntiques six years ago was by Suzanne Bernouard. I am thrilled to finally have another painting by her available. Suzanne exhibited at the prominent Galerie Druet in the 1920s and at the Salon des Tuileries. One of the most important art critics of his time, André Salmon writes about Suzanne Bernouard and the (French) Arts and Crafts movement in his book "Young French Painting in 1912: "One could not neglect either Mademoiselles Albertine or Suzanne Bernouard, whose art is minor yet occupies a place of importance (...) They paint and embroider. It is not decorative art that lead them to painting. They paint flowers and lilies (...) They have imagined fabulous and live roses that shimmer on the cushions of drawing rooms where the most modern poems are recited and where the boldest melodies resound. One song by Ravel makes their petals shake" Suzanne was the sister of poet and publisher François Bernouard and the wife of the architect and artist Louis Sue (1875-1968), who was also a major figure the art nouveau mouvement. The painting presented was in Louis Sue's personal collection and comes from his estate. It bears o...
