Description

A superb Queen Anne side chair c1710 the condition is outstanding for such great age, from the home of John Kenworthy-Brown a man who understands and appreciates the very best of fine furniture. shaped splat backrest, drop in seat, raised on cabriole legs, with shell carving to pad feet, beautifully upholstered in a traditional and sympathetic green fabric. PROVENANCE: From the private collection of JOHN KENWORTHY- BROWNE John Kenworthy-Browne is an art historian specialising in architecture and sculpture, principally from the neoclassical period. He was educated at Ampleforth College and Wadham College, Oxford, followed by the Courtauld Institute in London. John was the first National Trust curator at Dyrham Park, Gloucestershire, which he opened to the public in 1961. The Queen Mother visited Dyrham on 16th March 1962, and she was pictured with him outside the Assembly Rooms during the visit. After his time at Dyrham, John joined Christies where he catalogued furniture, and it was at Christies that he first became fascinated with sculpture. John has published numerous articles in Apollo, Burlington Magazine, The British Art Journal, Sculpture Journal and Country Life...
