Description

A pair of antique Derby porcelain figures, end of 18th century, modelled as a girl with yarn winder and boy reading. Both have been hand painted in enamels. These figurines have been made with exceptional care; their natural postures, facial expressions and beautiful clothes all speak of the highest level of master attention. The girl is dressed in a light dress with floral ornament, trimmed with lace, a green blouse with orange stripes on top, a headdress with golden ornament on her head, coral beads and golden earrings perfectly complement her clothes. On her knees there is a bag with yarn. The details of the clothes are jewellery made of porcelain, especially the porcelain laces. The boy is dressed in a light green jacket with gold buttons and trimmed with gold, a waistcoat in a pinkish tone with gold trim, striped light pink with purple trousers and shoes with gold buckles. In his hands he holds a small red book. Both sitting on fancy gilded chairs, the boy has a beautiful bouquet under his chair, which he didn't give to the girl for some reason. The figures standing on a circular flatterly decorated and scroll moulded base. All details of the figurines are made ver...
