Description

Robert Winchester Fraser 1848-1906. During his lifetime, Robert Winchester Fraser was the best known of the artists members of his family. He established his style early, and produced fresh and fluent landscape watercolours throughout his career. After moving to London from Bedford in 1873, he established himself as an artist in the following year exhibiting watercolours in London, at both the Society of British Artists (1874-1886) and the Dudley Gallery (1874-1882), and publishing his for Good Works. He also exhibited regularly at the Royal Academy (1876-1889) and in the provinces. From 1883 he exhibited mainly at the Institute of Painters in Water Colours (1883-1894) and also at the Bedford Annual Art Exhibitions (1884-86). He moved out of London, living in Bromley and Hemingford Grey, and following his second marriage in 1888, at Hampton Hill, Staines and Soham. His two sons, Robert James Winchester Fraser (by his first wife) and Francis George Gordon Fraser (by his second wife) both became artists.
