Description

Rare 17th Century Neapolitan Ebony Tortoiseshell and Mother of Pearl Cabinet. From the Perego Collection in Monza, an important 17th Century Italian architectural ebony and tortoiseshell cabinet inlaid with mother of pearl and pewter on a Baroque walnut base with the noble crest of the Caracciolo family. Italy, Naples circa 1670. Of architectural form, a fine ebony and tortoiseshell veneered Baroque cabinet with mother of pearl inlaid beading and pewter stringing, having a rarely seen geometrically banded top and sides conforming with the drawer fronts. Centred by a removable architectural panel with Solomonic columns, enclosing an arrangement of smaller drawers over an apron drawer and surmounted by a pediment drawer, flanked by two banks of ebony ripple moulded drawers of two smaller over three larger drawers to each side. Raised on a richly carved Baroque walnut base with central plumed crest to be of the noble Caracciolo family on out-srolled legs. The base was a 17th century period Baroque console of the Caracciolo family that was cleverly adapted to house the cabinet. Extremely rare to find, this cabinet also comes with provenance as once part of The Perego ...
