Description

A gorgeous pair of Victorian cut glass rinsing bowls. Rinsers or coolers were used for chilling or rinsing wine glasses at the table, between courses. One per person would be placed on the table, facilitating the repeated use of the same glass for different wines. Later on, it became more common to have a different glass for each wine. Although it's original use is no longer relevant, the rinsing bowl can be a lovely collector's item and has a practical use as a bowl. These beautiful examples have geometric cutting to the sides and star cut bases. Dimensions below.
