Description

This beautiful and decorative pair of Neoclassical green serpentine columns hails from the heart of France, crafted meticulously in the 19th century. They are a testament to the timeless elegance and sophistication of Neoclassical design. The columns are beautifully made with green serpentine, a unique material known for its vibrant and captivating hue. This striking colour adds a touch of opulence, making these pedestals truly decorative pieces that can enhance any space. The design of the columns is rooted in the Neoclassical form, characterised by its symmetry, simplicity, and grandeur. The pedestals sit on octagonal bases, a shape that adds stability and an interesting visual element to the overall design. The central feature of these columns is the spiral carved twisted column. This intricate detail showcases the exceptional craftsmanship of the period, with each twist and turn of the spiral meticulously carved to perfection. The column tapers gracefully, leading the eye upwards to the revolving circular tops. These revolving circular tops add a dynamic element to the design. They provide a platform for displaying objects, further enhancing the decorative pot...
