Description

This elegant late Georgian mahogany tea table, dating back to the year 1800, is a testament to the elegance and craftsmanship of the Georgian era. The table, with its distinctive D-shaped fold-over top, is a stunning piece of furniture that would add a touch of sophistication to any room. The table's top is crafted from finely figured mahogany, known for its rich, deep colour and attractive grain. This surface is adorned with a broad rosewood cross-banding and a boxwood inlay line, adding a layer of intricate detail and contrast to the piece. When opened, the table reveals a polished mahogany surface, reflecting the light and enhancing the beauty of the wood. The frieze of the table is equally impressive, featuring an attractive rosewood inlay and brass lines. These elements add a touch of luxury and refinement to the table, making it a standout piece. Supporting the table are reeded sabre legs, a characteristic feature of Georgian furniture. These legs not only provide stability but also contribute to the overall aesthetic of the table, with their elegant shape and detailed reeding. In summary, this late Georgian mahogany tea table is a beautiful blend of form and function.
