Description

Charles Sillem Lidderdale British, (1831-1895) The Scholar Oil on canvas, signed with monogram & dated (18)94 Image size: 26.5 inches x 19.5 inches Size including frame: 33.5 inches x 26.5 inches A wonderful half-length portrait of a girl seated on a bench holding a writing board and pencil. The girl, who wears a white smock over a red dress, is depicted with her eyes cast downwards as she ponders her schoolwork. Pictured to the bottom left are two exercise books, one of which lies open. An inkwell can be seen on the open shelf above, whilst a well-worn jacket hangs on the opposite wall, perhaps belonging to the teacher or another pupil. Charles Sillem Lidderdale was born in St Petersburg, Russia on 28 September 1830 to John Lidderdale and his wife Ann (née Morgan). His father was a merchant banker originally from Scotland and his mother was a British subject born in Russia. It is likely he was educated in England along with his brother William Lidderdale (1832-1902), who later became Governor of the Bank of England. In 1843, the family left Russia for England where they lived in London. Tragically, his mother died shortly after the move and his father passed away jus...
