Description

This useful long arm library book grabber which is made of wood with brass fittings dates from the 19th Century, has a great colour and patina and is in excellent condition. This antique reacher which is approx 152 cm in length has a brass claw at the end and brass lever mechanism which all works well. This grabber would have been used in a library to reach books on high shelves or in a shop. Today this would make a really useful piece for the home that also looks great on display or ideal for use in a book shop, library, hotel, restaurant or bar. Dimensions: Approx Length: 152 cm (60"). Weight: 640 g. Condition: Very good used antique condition with a nice patina and signs of use in keeping with age. The spring mechanism is in working order and the claw at the end grabs well. Please note that only the grabber is included and any other items in the pictures are for display only.
