This is a fine quality antique English Victorian box stool, constructed from flame mahogany, with a newly upholstered hinged brown leather seat, incorporating an internal storage area, circa 1850, in good condition. It started life out as a commode, but has been converted into a stool. The Victorian box stool comprises a mahogany serpentine shaped box frame, with a newly upholstered brown leather hinged seat, finished with brass studwork, encompassed by a mahogany moulding and brass inset carrying handles. The seat itself is firm, which means that you won't sink into the upholstery, but at the same time, it is very comfortable to sit on....
