Description

Oil on canvas c.1650 in a good quality reproduction gilt frame of 17th c. type; a charming painting of a young boy, painted within a feigned oval, by a Follower of Pieter Nason. Pieter Nason (1612 - 1689) was a talented portraitist who left Amsterdam in 1639 to settle in The Hague. On arrival he abandoned his rather outdated manner in favour of the fashionable style popular in the court-capital. His smooth technique and habit of painting young children in fantasy costumes (a mixture of the fashions of the day and a pseudo-historical look) helped make Nason a sought after and valued portraitist both inside and outside the Netherlands. He worked for a time at the Court of Charles II in England. Size: 30.5 x 26 inches framed 26 x 21 inches canvas size Provenance: stretcher bears old stamp of a French restorer.
