Description

Original and skillfully made porcelain figurine of a man leaning over the basket in the form of sweetmeat dish. A man in fancy dress, wearing a hat and carrying a shoulder bag. The clothes are richly decorated with colorful patterns, some details gilded. He is standing near a candy dish basket with handles mounted on a rocaille pedestal. The basket hand painted with charming flowers. The figurine is finely hand-painted with excellent detailing, including the color patterns on the jacket and waistcoat and fine facial details. The base of the figurine has KPM cobalt blue mark in the form of a scepter, which corresponds to the stated date of manufacture. KPM, or Königliche Porzellan Manufaktur ('Royal Porcelain Factory' in English), is Berlin's oldest porcelain factory and Germany's second oldest. It was founded in 1763 and continues to produce porcelain to this day. In the 18th and 19th centuries; KPM specialized in the production of porcelain dinner services, figurines, painted plaques, vases and more. They were particularly associated with the popular mid-18th century Rococo style and with its replacement by the more austere Neoclassicism of the early 19th century. Across...
