Description

Stunning portrait of a chestnut horse with a white blaze mounted in a beautiful 19th century gilt frame and slip. The painting dates from the 19th Century and is attributed to Charles Verlat and has plaque with his name on the front of the painting. Verlat (25 November 1824 – 23 October 1890) was a Belgian painter, watercolorist, engraver (printmaker), art educator and director of the Antwerp Academy. He painted many subjects and was particularly known as an animalier and portrait painter. He also created Orientalist works, genre scenes, including a number of singeries, religious compositions and still lifes. He was educated at the Academy in Antwerp under the direction of G. Wappers and N. De Keyser. He was a professor of drawing and director of the Antwerp Academy when Vincent van Gogh spent a brief period as a student at the Academy in 1886. The two men got into arguments about van Gogh's unconventional style of drawing. He was also a student of E. Hamman and J. Lies. Verlat stayed in Paris from 1850 to 1868 and took lessons there under the guidance of A. Scheffer, H. Flandrin and Th. Couture and came into contact with G. Courbet. He was teacher and director at th...
