Description

Edwardian Adam style hall table This Edwardian Adam style hall table was made circa 1910 in one of the top London workshops. Probably Maple & co but there were other comparable workshops who made this fine furniture. The cabinetmaker used the influence of Robert Adams furniture designs in the design of this fine hall table. The mahogany table is fitted 3 drawers, all fitted with the original brass handles. The front has multiple flutes to the front. It stands on tapering legs joining the H stretchers. The hall table is polished to the rear and so, if need be, can be set away from the wall. This is a fine quality item of Edwardian furniture that is not only very attractive it also has multiple uses in your home.
