Description

An outstanding and stylish late Regency birds eye maple oval shaped antique centre table attributed to Gillows of Lancaster and London. Throughout, the table has beautiful figured birds eye maple with tulip shaped moulding around the frieze of the top with a central tapering column terminating to out swept scrolls finished with turned paterae. The tables oval platform base mirrors the shape of the top which has a turned moulded edge and turned feet with inset castors. Although Regency in date the table has an Art Deco aesthetic and would look superb in a contemporary or traditional home, in particular placed in an entrance hall or bay window.
