Description

Fabulous 17th century oak refectory table. The detachable planked top is held in place with three wooden pegs, shaped apron and raised on turned legs united by stretchers, there is a date carved to the inside of the apron of 1690. With expected signs of wear and tear and general use commensurate with a piece of furniture of such immense age, overall this wonderful table has a lovely colour and patina, it is full of character and is a really lovely piece of functional furniture.
