Description

This is a beautiful and superior example of a type known to collectors as a Carmarthen coffer, and must be the neatest one that I've encountered in fifty-five years of handling such pieces. The top section has a polished surface above an inlaid frieze, over two doors each with a pair of gothic-shaped panels enclosing a shelved interior, over a base section with two small drawers flanked by a pair of larger drawers, the whole raised on bracket feet. It has a wonderful lustrous colour and surface. Cardiganshire (Ceredigion), circa 1770 (The handles and knobs are old replacements) See "Welsh Furniture 1250-1950: A Cultural History of Craftsmanship and Design" for similar examples. Height: 51.5 ins; 131 cms Width: 49 ins; 124.5 Depth: 18 ins; 45.75 cms Internal depth of top section: 15 ins; 38 cms
