Description

High quality English Coalport Porcelain vase Hampton Boat with two gilded handles, late 19th century. The piece has a dark cobalt blue ground which has been richly hand-painted with the finest gold pattern. Vase decorated with cartouches on both sides, with classical nature landscapes, raised on four rich gilded feet, the bottom with printed factory marks. Coalport porcelain was first produced in 1795 by John Rose, who established a factory in Coalport, Shropshire, England. The company quickly gained a reputation for producing high-quality porcelain with intricate designs and fine craftsmanship. In 1814, the Coalport factory was purchased by William Pountney, who expanded the business and increased production. During the 19th century, Coalport porcelain was highly sought after and exported to many countries. The company continued to produce porcelain changing the owners a number of times, before it became part of the Wedgwood group in 1967. Coalport Porcelain was known for its fine figurines and other decorative items, and the company was particularly noted for its high-quality casting techniques. This piece is in perfect condition, there are no other chips, cracks, cra...
