Description

This impressive Edwardian mahogany revolving desk chair, with its studded green leather seat and back, is spacious and particularly comfortable. In its previous life, it sat opposite a static four-legged chair of the same design, either side of a large partner's desk in a solicitor's office. That's why, when it was designed, making sure it was comfortable was so important, it was to be sat in for long periods. This chair also benefits from a height adjustment mechanism under the seat. It's easy to operate and very smooth - just spin the seat anti-clockwise to go up or clockwise to go down. It also allows you to gently rock back and ponder over the day's issues. As you can see this revolving desk chair has now been sensitively restored. Here are some extra measurements - the seat height is 44 cm (min) or 49 cm (max). The seat itself is 44 cm wide x 49 cm deep. The height of the back of the chair is 80 cm (min) or 85 cm (max). Please keep an eye on our stock page as its partner will also be for sale in September.
