Description

An 18th century Drunkards chair, mainly constructed from walnut with an elm seat and a little bit of ash. Lovely colour and patination, with lot of old repairs including old iron work and timber repairs. This chair is for restoration or as an ornamental object in its current untouched condition. This chair is not currently suitable for sitting on, there is a snapped rail (pictured), this chair could be used if it was professionally restored, equally it is a very good display example in its current condition.
