Description

This is an antique spindle back rocker. An English, beech and elm country house rocking chair, dating to the late Victorian period, circa 1900. Superb craftsmanship to this traditionally appealing rocker. Displaying a desirable aged patina and in good order. Select beech and elm shows fine grain interest throughout. Attractive, deep caramel hues beam across the country house form. Crest rail of deeply bowed form, accentuated with striking figuring. Five turned spindles form the back rest, with collared detail. Turned balusters supporting each serpentine arm. Wide, circular seat squab with gently recessed saddle slab adds to the comfort. Raised upon pleasingly turned and collared, stout legs. United by a turned double H-stretcher with tapered spindles. The long, arched rocking feet provide a relaxing, gentle motion. Relaxing motion would be ideal for a sunny porch or peaceful corner. This is a superb antique spindle back rocker, with appealing country or farmhouse charm. Ideal for the lounge or porch. Solid joints and construction, delivered ready for the home.
