Description

We are delighted to offer this splendid late Victorian/early Edwardian blue enamel pendant necklace made c.1900 in 9ct solid gold. Striking and distinguished from contemporary pieces, this pendant necklace features a wonderful deep blue enamel guilloché design in the centre with a fine floral/flower-like pattern underneath. The blue enamel has a gorgeous hue which is regal and mysterious in the shadows, yet presents a more transparent and vibrant tone when exposed to sunlight with a glossy surface. In addition to its rich enamelling, the centre is embellished with a single old cut diamond surrounded by a cluster of seed pearls. A wonderful accent and touch to the overall piece making it a truly splendid and charming antique piece. Modest in size yet opulent in colour, craftsmanship and intricacy, this necklace might just be the perfect piece for the discerning antique jewellery lover. Ideal both as a collectible and versatile piece of jewellery to wear as a standalone piece or amongst other jewellery. A spectacular gift for someone special or for yourself - Pearls are known to be the birthstone for June and diamonds, April. The pendant is unmarked as is common...
