Description

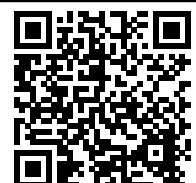

A large gilt-bronze carriage clock in the English style by Delépine-Barrois who at this time were also supplying movements and complete clocks for Jacot to finish. The eight-day duration movement is fitted with a platform lever escapement which is stamped with the initials 'G.V.' as seen on the platforms of other Delépine carriage clocks and numbered to both the top and the underside 68269. The balance cock is finely engraved, an adornment that was quite probably undertaken with the clock in London, and has a Breguet overcoil to the hairspring and steel bridge to stop the regulation index moving, as seen on the finer Henri Jacot carriage clock escapements. The movement strikes the hours and half-hours on a gong with the gong block stamped with the initials F.D. for the gong maker, and has a push button to the top to repeat the strike of the last hour at will. Both the backplate and rear shuttered door are stamped with a hand setting arrow design as used by Delépine. The silvered dial has black Roman hour numerals, blued steel spade hands and signed for the retailer and maker F.W. Clerke, 1 Royal Exchange. The substantial gilt-bronze pillared case was almost certainly ma...
