Description

A mahogany cased clock from the north-west. The case is of fine quality, with well chosen decorative veneers, and has architectural details typical of the north-west of England. The 13" break arch dial has a moonroller automaton, with subtle artwork, and the spandrels in each corner are silvered, an unusual and attractive feature. This was probably due to the first owner's request, as the silvering appears to be original. It is signed by Nicholas Wilson of Kendal. The centre of the dial is finely engraved, and with the words ' Thus irrevocable time flieth away ', in a cartouche. The four pillar movement is of eight day duration Height 85" c. 1785

Internal Ref: long case clock
