Description

Late 19thc Camphor Wood Chest A unique and aromatic piece of antique furniture. Camphor wood, prized for its natural insect-repellent properties and distinctive fragrance, was often used to make chests and trunks. This late 19th-century example showcases the beauty and practicality of this exotic material. Key features:

- Camphor wood construction: Renowned for its durability, aroma, and insect-repellent qualities.
- Brass corners and edging: Provide added protection and a touch of elegance.
- Steel carrying handles: Sturdy and reliable, these handles make the chest easy to transport.
