Description

A set of three hand blown glass decanters each etched with their intended contents, namely 'Rum', 'Brandy' and 'Hollands' [Dutch Gin], c.1790-1800. All decanters retain their original stopper with each stopper only fitting its original decanter. All three decanters are in a remarkably good condition with only light pitting to the glass in areas (please see photographs) and no chips/cracks to bottle nor stopper. The glass of each has all of the qualities expected from an old hand blown piece; thick and full of bubbles and character. A great looking set. Literature: Andy McConnell, The Decanter An Illustrated History Of Glass From 1650, 2004, p.187, plate 261.
