Description

This mid-20th-century oil painting by Swedish artist, Sam Uhrdin (1886-1964), depicts a woman undertaking crafts by a window. Uhrdin was an accomplished painter of scenes, portraits, and landscapes. A wooden interior creaks with the rhythm of endeavour as sunlight cascades between curtains. Beyond, two open doors lead through to a kitchen with a tantalising glimpse of a radiant garden. It's a quiet moment captured with sensitivity. Born in Tasbäck, Dalarna, Sam Uhrdin was raised in the most idyllic surroundings. Where handicrafts were integral to the local culture. Dalarna is blessed with mountains, views, and picturesque lakes - everything an artist could wish for. His father, the rather splendidly named Sam Uhr Uhrdin the Elder, was a master of 'Kurbit painting', which is a folk art style involving bright and elaborately designed furnishings. From an early age, young Uhrdin was surely inspired. After his initial tuition at home, he moved to Stockholm - painting in the daytime and studying in the evening. Quite an adventure for a 17-year-old. His ambition took him to America where he worked as a sign painter before returning home via London and Paris. It's interestin...
