Description

A beautiful and elegant WMF silver plate tea and coffee set, circa 1906, in the Jugendstil style. The set comprises a tea pot, coffee pot, milk jug, and sugar bowl, and is documented in the 1906 WMF catalogue. Reflecting the classic characteristics of the Art Nouveau period, the pieces feature a refined beehive form, with raised linear blocks and teardrop medallions. The lid pulls are adorned with a stylised "Tree of Life" motif, while the woven rattan handles offer a pleasing contrast in texture. It is rare to find a complete set in such excellent condition, with no repairs or soldering. Dimensions given are for the largest pot. WMF (Württembergische Metallwarenfabrik), founded in 1853 by industrialist Daniel Straub in Geislingen, Germany, originally produced metal goods for the railroad industry. In 1880, it expanded into cutlery by acquiring a factory in Heilbronn, starting its production of stainless steel and silver cutlery. WMF grew internationally, establishing branches across Europe and beyond. The company became renowned for its innovative use of plated silver, developing advanced techniques to create high-quality products. During the Art Nouveau period, WMF ...
