Description

An exquisite oil on canvas by a very talented artist, Joaquín Luque Roselló (Málaga , September 27, 1865 - Buenos Aires , January 23, 1932). This beautiful example has been owned by my clients family for many decades and is fresh to the market, a true masterpiece. Joaquin Rosello began his artistic training at the School of Fine Arts in Malaga, where he was a student of Emilio Ocón y Rivas and José Villegas Cordero . In 1893 he obtained a scholarship to continue his studies in Rome . In 1909 he traveled to Argentina , settling in the city of Buenos Aires, where he was a drawing teacher at the National Academy of Buenos Aires, and remained in this country until his death in 1932. At the National Exhibition of Fine Arts (Spain) in 1887 he won a third medal for his work Cesar Borgia renouncing the cathedral purple before Pope Borgia , in 1893 he won the gold medal at the International Exhibition in Vienna and in 1901 he won first prize at the Berlin exhibition with a canvas entitled Salve Regina . He also exhibited on several occasions in the art shows of the Witcomb Salon in Buenos Aires organized by the Catalan dealer José Artal and the painter José Pinelo . His works O...
