Description

George V tortoiseshell leather wing chair This Tortoiseshell leather wing chair was made circa 1930. The chair maker used a classic design of the Georgian period. I particularly like the shaped back rail and the way the top corners are stepped. The leather has the wonderful tortoiseshell effect leather finish, giving it a most different and attractive look. The wing chair with the hundreds of brass headed nails that secure the leather to the wooden frame. It stands on Chippendale design square front legs that are joined by an H shaped stretcher. The stuffed seat is lovely and firm and so giving you wonderful support while after a hard day's toil you can sit back and relax. Imagine the compliments on your choice and your family and friends vying who can sit in it first!!
