Description

This beautiful oak hanging press cupboard features a molded dentil cornice above a pair of shaped, paneled doors that open to reveal a hanging space inside. It sits on a base with four lip-molded dummy drawers and four functional drawers, with paneled ends and an oak paneled back. It's in excellent condition and still has its original brass hardware, wooden pegs, and all the boarding. Two of the door hinges have been replaced. Other names for this type of cupboard include livery cupboard, harness cupboard, linen press, hanging press, and housekeeper's cupboard. Circa 1780. A hanging rail or shelves can be fitted if desired.
