Description

Oil on Canvas 'Coming in to Harbour' Gustave de Bréanski (c1856-1899) * English 19th Century * Gustave de Bréanski (c1856-1899) * Oil on Canvas * Paintings by this artist are increasingly sought after by discerning collectors * H: 68cm (26.8") W: 53cm (20.9") The painting portrays a Sussex lugger, a type of wooden fishing boat, making its way into the harbour past a wooden breakwater or jetty, with a white lighthouse at its end, set against the backdrop of chalk cliffs and a dramatic sky. It could well be Newhaven in East Sussex, a location previously depicted by this artist, although the harbour has undergone significant changes since the 1880s. Nonetheless, it is definitely one of the harbours on the East Sussex or Kent coastline. Presently, Gustave de Bréanski's paintings are increasingly sought after by discerning collectors. Biographical details may be found in The Dictionary of British Artists, and The Dictionary of Victorian Painters by Christopher Wood. Gustave de Bréanski (circa 1856-1899) Gustave de Bréanski, a British artist of the late 19th century, was born around 1856 in Greenwich, London, though some records suggest it might have been in the second...
