Description

A couple of antique Viennese amphora vases, crafted by Ernst Wahliss circa 1910, showcases exquisite craftsmanship and intricate detailing, reflective of early 20th-century Austrian porcelain artistry. The vases features a blush ivory background adorned with delicate blue and gold floral patterns, predominantly asters that are finely hand-painted and outlined in gold. The top are reticulated—decoratively pierced—adding complexity to the design. Each floral motif is piped with gilding and further enhanced with gold drops, giving the surface a subtle, three-dimensional texture. The vases relief decoration, particularly the braided gold band at the center, provides additional depth and tactile quality. This element showcases the labor-intensive porcelain techniques employed during the era. The body of the vases is decorated with gilded twisted handles on the shoulders, combining form with function and emphasizing the luxurious style of the pieces. Gilding is also applied to the rim and base, underlining their elegant form and giving the vases a ...
