Description

This is a most charming print of a puppy carrying around a pheasant feather after Yi Am (Korean, 1499–1566). The genre of animal painting was first recognized as an independent subject in Korea in the eleventh century. During the Joseon dynasty (1392–1910), the genre gained further importance as one of the three subjects included in the official proficiency examination for court painters. Yi Am, a descendant of the Joseon royal family, enjoyed great success as a painter not only in Korea, but also in Japan, where his images were appreciated and studied. He specialized in animal painting, and had a particular interest in dogs, as seen in this work. This print from the late 19th / early 20th Century appears to be on linen and has red stamps to the right hand side. Presented in a later deep brass frame with bamboo mount which suits it well, it is in excellent condition and measures 57 cms by 50 cms by 5 cms deep. UK delivery is £15
