Where oh where to begin! This thing is impressive in every single way, firstly, it must weight 200kgs, it is immense being solid metal and I mean solid, the whole thing looks to be nickel plated chrome and it was done a long time ago based on the patina. The main body depicts brick pattern castle turrets which are topped with cylindrical columns, the central footrest is an old piece of wonderfully patinaed oak, the side seats are English leather in Regency green. The seats have been newly upholstered in the finest Italian Cattle Hide leather, they have then been hand dyed six times, antiqued, sealed waxed down and polished. This fender would have been made with no expense spared for a grand castle or stat...
