Description

DESCRIPTION: This is a wonderful and rare rocking Father Time oak and mahogany long case clock, with an eight-day movement on a broken arch brass dial with a rocking Father Time. The clock is made by Willm Hay of Wolverhampton. This clock is absolutely perfect for anyone looking for a clock to place straight into their home. If we start with the hood, this has swan necks which are finished with lovely brass pateras. Above the door is beautifully inlaid with stringing. The door is mahogany cross banded and has a pretty little brass knob and again has been nicely inlaid with stringing. Pretty reeded book end columns flank the hood door. If we then move down to the trunk it has a lovely Architectural shaped fully length shaped door which is cross banded in mahogany and with a lovely conch shell inlaid to the centre of the door. Above the door is nicely inlaid and below the door is an applied panel which has been inlaid with a love pattern. The door is also complete with its lock and key which is fully working. The door is then flanked by reeded book end columns and above and below the columns has been nicely inlaid. Finally the base has is nicely cross banded in mahogan...
