Description

DESCRIPTION: This is a truly exquisite and very rare Chippendale style antique mahogany eight-day brass faced, longcase / grandmother clock, which is of the most fabulous petite proportions. This century old piece has a lovely Westminster Chimes movement. The case is also wonderful being made from mahogany which has a lovely patina and throughout the case there has been exceptional attention to detail. If we start with the hood this has swan neck with wonderful rose pateras. The hood door is flanked by delicate reeded columns and to the rear are lovely shaped back splats. Above the hood door is stunning Chinese Chippendale blind fretwork and the top is finished with two very detailed finials. The swan necks, above the hood door and to the base of the hood has been superbly carved. The attention to detail is superb and creates the most exquisite effect. If we then move down to the trunk this has beautifully full-length slim door which is nicely shaped to the top. The door is flanked by quarter reeded Corinthian columns. The door is complete with its lock and key which is fully working. Above the door and to the base of the columns is further Chinese Chippendale blind fretwork.
