Description

DESCRIPTION: This is a wonderful and extremely rare rocking Seesaw mahogany long case clock, with an eight-day movement on a broken arch brass dial with a rocking seasaw with a wonderful boy and girl to either end. The clock is made by John Garman of Meonstoke and is absolutely perfect for anyone looking for a clock to place straight into their home. If we start with the hood, this has swan necks which are finished with lovely turned pateras. The top is finished with three lovely turned finials. The door has a pretty little bovine shield to the key hole. Pretty turned columns flank the hood door with lovely shaped back splats to the rear. To the sides are lovely shaped glass panels which allow the movement to be viewed. The door is complete with its lock and key which is fully working. The same key operated both the hood and trunk door. If we then move down to the trunk it has a lovely shaped fully length shaped door. Above the door is a pretty half turned acorn. The door is also complete with its lock and key which is fully working. The same key operated both the hood and trunk door. The door is then flanked by carved detailing. Finally the base has a nicely cross ...
