Description

DESCRIPTION: This is a wonderful English mahogany cased barograph by CASELLA LONDON. The case is super quality having deep bevelled glass to all sides and the top and has a lovely feature of a chart drawer in which spare charts and other items can be stored. The case is made from mahogany which is a lovely colour as can be seen from the photographs. The barograph takes barometric measurements which in turn are recorded on a paper record sheet which is mounted on a clockwork revolving cylinder, the ink nib draws a line on the chart as the pressure rises and falls. The cylinder makes one full revolution in one week. CASELLA are a renowned instrument maker and are still trading today, but you can trace it's beginnings back to 1799. Some of the history of the company is as follows: ' Cesare Tagliabue first established a company in London in 1799 to manufacture scientific apparatus during the reign of King George III. Not long after, Louis Pascal Casella joined him in partnership and the Casella company name was born. In the early years, products designed and built by Casella and exported worldwide included navigation/exploration and photographic devices, as well as meteo...
